was subscribed by several business men to organize and capitalize this company for the purpose of accommodating the many thousands of citizens of Washington who have no credit at the National Banks and were obliged to patronize the high rate loan companies. Institutions of this kind have come to be recognized as perfectly legitimate and a necessity in modern city life. They fill a want in the community that cannot be supplied by the banks, and if managed properly and fairly, pursuing a broad and liberal policy toward their clients the loan company can do a vast amount of good. That is our policy.
